

Canceling an extended warranty

Your warranty terms should say how to cancel the extended warranty. They should also state your time limit to cancel. If you are unsure, contact the warranty company directly.

Getting a warranty can be a condition of financing, but dealers cannot force you to get it from a specific company. BC law allows you 30 days to cancel the warranty.

BC law requires dealers to provide warranty information before a sale. They must provide that information to the best of their knowledge. Dealers have a duty to learn about the warranty so they can give you this information. This duty includes learning how to cancel a warranty.